Fall 2016, Issue 40, December 9, 2016*

Greetings . . .

As we head into the last day of classes and beginning of finals, check out some of the possibilities below for getting off-campus and taking a much needed break from studying.

As well, see information about applying for scholarships or for awards to recognize the research you have done anytime in the 2016 calendar year.

This week we had a successful research day, highlights of which will appear in next week's issue along with our salute to the graduating seniors.

Good luck in this last phase of the semester!

Meet the Wheelwoman Saturday, December 10

Meet Louise Gibson and her bicycle, Sylvia. The year is 1895, and Louise has just ridden in from the recently established railroad town of Takoma Park to visit the nation's capital and the Smithsonian for the day. Join her at the wheel, as she rides through the museum discovering new sites and newfound freedom through her bicycle.

From the 1880s to the 1910s, Americans took to the wheel, sparking a nationwide bicycle craze. For riders-especially women-bicycles were a means of personal mobility, of independence. The new freedoms afforded by cycling empowered women to challenge social norms.

LOCATION: National Museum of American History, 1400 Constitution Ave NW, Washington, DC

TIME: Saturday, December 10, 12:00-12:45 pm

Spotlight: 2016 NWSA Asma Amirah Neblett

Each year the Department of Women's Studies sponsors two students to attend the National Women's Studies Association conference. A few weeks ago, WMST major Asma Neblett and WMST certificate student Ciera Richardson attended the 2016 meeting in Montreal. Ciera shared her experience of the conference in last week's newsletter; this week Asma gives her perspective.

Attending the 37th annual conference in Montreal, Canada was undeniably timely in light of the American general election. I had the privilege to retreat to the safe space of Women's Studies where scholars took to amending their presentations and panels to address the anxieties of marginal people, such as myself, through the timely theme of decoloniality.

I learned that decoloniality is a process of unlearning knowledges forced upon surveilled bodies (during periods of colonization, slavery, imperialism, and neoliberalism), in favor of self and localized knowledges that help us to think critically, subjectively, and generously about our relationships to space, people, culture, and self.

After exploring panels on queer citizenship in the Caribbean and gender and the law, I attended a panel on self-identified lesbicas negras (Black lesbians) of Brazil and learned about how they actively decolonize their gynecological wellness by petitioning the Brazilian government for reformation-which is incredibly relevant to me.

In my senior honors thesis on surveillance and human security, I use wellness as a device to reconceptualize an understanding of security to consider categories of emotional, mental, and psychic wellbeing. Learning about lesbicas negras efforts to improve their gynecological wellness in a largely heteronormative region of the world is a matter of security, resistance, and decoloniality, and it helped me to re-postulate my argument.

I somehow managed to meet Dr. Angela Davis in the elevator, helped her find her hotel room, and celebrated Drs. Beverly Guy-Sheftall (Words of Fire), Barbara Ransby (Ella Baker and the Black Freedom Movement), and other Black feminist foremothers for their contributions to feminist scholarship and decoloniality throughout their careers.

NWSA 37th imparted onto me joy, optimism, reconciliation, and motivation to continue engaging in academic and activist realms that advocate for constitutional, social, and emotional reformation for the sake of a more equitable and decolonized world. As I prepare for my graduation this month, I will hold these lessons from the conference very close to my heart.

Triota Induction Ceremony

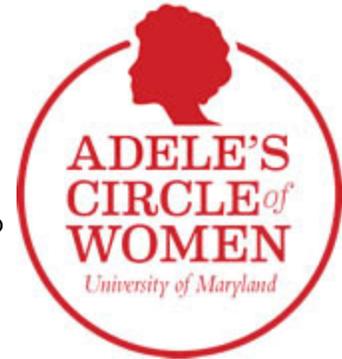

In November, Triota, the Women's Studies honor society, inducted seven new members: Kalyn Cai, Zemaye Meseretu, Miranda Mlilo, Valentina Nunez, Jenna Sminkey, Shyra Stevens, and Anusha Yedia. Congratulations!

Triota inductees and officers.

National Women's Party at Belmont-Paul Women's Equity National Monument

Seeking interns for Spring of 2017!

The National Woman's Party, located at the Belmont-Paul Women's Equality National Monument on Capitol Hill, is currently looking for interns who will support collections stewardship activities and improve intellectual access to the NWP collection.

In 2020, the United States will celebrate the centennial of the 19th Amendment, granting women the right to vote. The NWP and its partners will celebrate through nationwide programs, exhibitions, scholarly publications, and new digital resources. The intern will work with staff to prepare collections materials for these new initiatives and assist with a variety of collections stewardship projects and tasks.

Several stipend-based internships are offered each semester (fall, summer, and spring) to graduate and undergraduate students. Internships are part-time, 16 hours per week, Mondays and Tuesdays preferred. A taxable stipend is awarded with the internship.

Academic backgrounds can be diverse, but preference is usually given to students with experience in museums, library science, archives, public history, or digital media. Applicants may also be recently retired and/or recently employed in the mentioned fields. Knowledge of archival policies and procedures is preferred. Must be well-organized and detailed-oriented, have a professional attitude, strong written and verbal skills, and have ability to work on multiple projects simultaneously and independently. Interns are encouraged to participate in educational programs, and other staff activities.

Three different internships:
Collections Management
Metadata Assistant
Collections Education and Outreach

Application packages must include all of the following to receive consideration:

- Cover letter
- Resume or curriculum vitae detailing your experience, career interests, and internship goals
- List of 3 references

Send complete package by email (no direct mail) to the attention of Jennifer Krafchik, Deputy Director at info@nationalwomansparty.org. No phone calls please.

For more details go to: <http://nationalwomansparty.org/about/internships/>

Additional Internships and Jobs

The Fund for the Public Interest is a national non-profit organization that works to build support for progressive organizations across the country. This year, the Fund is working with the Human Rights Campaign on a campaign to build public support for the Equality Act, a federal bill that would prohibit discrimination against LGBT people in employment, housing, and education. Right now, people risk being fired or losing their homes in 28 states for being lesbian, gay, or bisexual and in 30 states for being trans.

The Fund is hiring students as paid staff to help with this campaign and with citizen outreach work this fall. As paid campaign staff, students will build grassroots power, learn the building blocks of political organizing, and work closely with senior staff management team. Both part-time and full-time positions available.

Quote of the Week

"You called me an agitator. If you don't believe that that's a compliment, the next time you wash your clothes you must take the agitator out of your washer and see if you don't have just a bunch of wet dirty clothes. And you are right. What I'm going to do is get all the dirt out and leave this country clean."
