Things Get Lost by Michaela Pilar Brown

Now through January 28

Artist Michaela Pilar Brown's work has long grappled with issues attendant to the black body and its relationship to larger cultural themes of age, gender, race, sexuality, history, and violence. In Things Get Lost, Brown assembles photography, collage, and installation artworks that examine the collecting of heirloom objects as a means of identity construction and the building of personal, familial, and community history. The result is a surreal counter-narrative to American history that re-centers black female subjectivity.

Some Minutes Through My Eyes

Thursday, December 22

In this play, Some Minutes through My Eyes, the sociological and cultural difficulties of women with partners suffering from drug addiction are explored. Atefeh reflects the life of a woman whose addicted husband leaves her in a limbo of paradoxical feelings of hate and love at the same time. The play is produced in Farsi (Persian) language with English subtitles. An adaptation of Before Breakfast by Eugene O'Neill.

Cost: $15 by cash at the door

LOCATION: Anacostia Arts Center,
1231 Good Hope Road, SE, Washington, DC
TIME: 7:30-8:30 pm

Cine-concert: Ladies First Saturday, January 14

Women formed an essential part of the early film industry. Not only were there female executives but women on screen came across as daring and modern. Miss Clever, for example, in the feature Das Geheimschloss (Apollo, 1914) dons disguises to help the police catch criminals. Initially, coveted roles were given to renowned stage actresses such as Sarah Bernhardt, but gradually younger unknowns such as Gigetta Morano in Le Acque miracolose (Eleuterio Rodolfi, Ambrosio, 1914) and Norma Talmadge in A Lady and Her Maid (Vitagraph, 1913) acquired huge followings. Other titles are Fleurs des champs (Gaumont, 1912) and Anna Karenina (Pathe Freres, 1911). (Total running time 89 minutes)

Spotlight: Department of Women's Studies Graduates

Today we Spotlight our graduates, celebrating their achievements, and wishing them well as they go forth from here.

Women's Studies Bachelor of Arts

Samantha Fleischer graduated in August 2016 with a degree in Women's Studies. She is currently working as a fellow at RespectAbility, a nonprofit working to empower people with disabilities. Samantha hopes to continue working on social justice issues and is particularly interested in women's rights, disability, conflict resolution, and Jewish social action.

Asma Amirah Neblett is graduating with a Bachelor of Arts in Women's Studies and a minor in Public Leadership. Her anthology, Various Narratives of Women: Telling Intersectional Stories on Womanhood, will be self-published in 2017. Asma (Ahhs-muh) intends to pursue a doctoral degree in Women's and Gender Studies to investigate the concepts of human security and futurities of wellness among sexually queer and gender queer Black women in America. She gives thanks to her family of profound sisterfriends, matrilineal line of pioneering Guyanese women, queer and non-queer feminist foremothers, her mentors, and the College of Arts and Humanities, Department of Women's Studies, her mother, who continues to actualize her dreams as a leader in healthcare, and Janet Damita Jo Jackson for creating a sound that introduced her to feminism in the first place.

Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Studies Certificate

Brad Flurer is graduating with a B.S. in Community Health and an LGBT Studies Certificate. He is also finishing up his full-time internship at the Alcohol & Other Drugs Unit of the University of Maryland Health Center. Brad had leadership roles in Pride Alliance and the Male-Identified Queers (MIQ) small group at the LGBT Equity Center. Brad is a child of deaf adults (CODA), and he aspires to work in health promotion with special populations after graduation.

Women's Studies Certificate

Rebecca Gwira -- I am graduating with a major in Psychology and Undergraduate Certificate in Women's Studies. I will be taking a year off to work, travel, and continue current research on black women and alcohol use in the Department of Psychology. I intend to return to school to pursue a PhD in Counseling Psychology with research interests focusing on women of color, respectability politics, and youth development. I am so grateful for the WMST courses, and for the extracurricular opportunities I have been a part of that were inspired by women's studies and helped expand my understanding of art, human nature, and culture. I am forever inspired by my time with you all.

Minor in Black Women's Studies

Nadia Turner is graduating with a B.S. in Kinesiology, minor in Black Women's Studies, and certificate from College Park Scholars Public Leadership Program. As a first-generation Trinidadian American, she found interest in a Caribbean Literature class and was eventually introduced to the minor. She has participated in the department's Undergraduate Research days and attended the Black Girl Movement Conference in NY last spring. All these experiences have had a lasting impact on her time at UMD. In the near future, she will be pursuing her Masters in Health Administration and hopes to one day manage health practices in low-income, minority neighborhoods.

Thank you to those who were able to provide us with bios and photos. We also celebrate our other graduates, wish you well, and hope you keep in touch!

University Relations Paid Summer Internship

Application Deadline: January 6, 2017

The Division of University Relations is offering a PAID Summer Development Internship Program for students interested in learning more about a career in philanthropy, fundraising and nonprofit work. During this ten week program interns will work with university departments to gain an understanding of fundraising in higher education. Through hands-on projects, co-curricular learning opportunities, and professional development sessions, interns will develop valuable skills to prepare them for future careers in fundraising and nonprofit work. Past intern projects include

- Meeting with donors and alumni to thank them for their support and engage them with campus
- Researching and identifying prospective donors
- Creating stewardship videos to thank donors and show the impact of their support
- Planning recognition events to honor donors
- Taking field trips to local nonprofits to learn more about fundraising at other organizations

Additional Internships and Jobs

The Fund for the Public Interest is a national non-profit organization that works to build support for progressive organizations across the country. This year, the Fund is working with the Human Rights Campaign on a campaign to build public support for the Equality Act, a federal bill that would prohibit discrimination against LGBT people in employment, housing, and education. Right now, people risk being fired or losing their homes in 28 states for being lesbian, gay, or bisexual and in 30 states for being trans.

The Fund is hiring students as paid staff to help with this campaign and with citizen outreach work this fall. As paid campaign staff, students will build grassroots power, learn the building blocks of political organizing, and work closely with senior staff management team. Both part-time and full-time positions available.
