*WMST/LGBT Undergraduate E-News
Spring 2018, Issue #64 April 6, 2018*

Greetings!

Thanks to everyone who came out to our Social Justice Hangout on Wednesday. We've had good conversations at each one this semester and this last one on language was no exception. Reminder: this was the last Social Justice Hangout for the semester because the first Wednesday in May will be WMST/LGBT Studies Undergraduate Research Day; look for more information about that in an upcoming newsletter.

Hopefully you are getting some time to get outside and enjoy the spring even if winter weather continues to threaten. There is a lot happening around the area and on-campus in the next week; check out the listings below.

The Spotlight this issue is on junior Women's Studies major Rachel Greenberg. Normally Rachel is one of the people working in the Women's Studies office putting together this newsletter but, this semester, she is studying abroad in Italy.

Women's Studies major Corissa Goodrich is working toward a Disabled Student Community Organization on campus. If you are interested in disability issues, there are three ways you might get involved: join in the organizing work, take a study break and come out on April 18 to discuss issues for disabled students, participate in a new blog that explores the disability experience at UMD. More on all these options below. Take a look and get in contact with Corissa.

Need funds? There are announcements for a number of awards and scholarships in this issue, all with April deadlines so get those applications ready.

And remember to look through the Careers4Terps section for information on jobs and internships.

Diane Arbus: A box of ten photographs

Diane Arbus was a major figure in the acceptance of photography as a legitimate art form. In the early 1970s Philip Leider, then editor in chief of Artforum and a photography skeptic, admitted, "With Diane Arbus, one could find oneself interested in photography or not, but one could no longer . . . deny its status as art. . . . What changed everything was the portfolio itself." That portfolio which was the catalyst for photography's evolution is the subject of a Smithsonian American Art Museum exhibit, A box of ten photographs.

LOCATION: Smithsonian American Art Museum, 8th and F Streets NW, Washington, DC

TIME: Open daily 11:30 AM - 7:00 PM

The Watermelon Woman Saturday, April 7

Cheryl Dunye's trailblazing debut film The Watermelon Woman, the first feature film directed by and about an African American lesbian, centers on the protagonist's search for information about the fictional Fae Richards, a black actress from 1930s Hollywood. The main character (played by Dunye) is determined to make a documentary about her elusive subject, and her research leads to an undiscovered archive of photographs of the actress and her milieu. Constructed by artist Zoe Leonard in collaboration with Dunye to be used as props in The Watermelon Woman, the Fae Richards Photo Archive is on display in the Outliers exhibition. (Cheryl Dunye, 1996, 90 minutes)

Theorist and coproducer of the film, Alexandra Juhasz, will introduce this new digital restoration.

Drawn to Purpose: American Women Illustrators and Cartoonists

Monday through Saturday

Drawn to Purpose features original works by women cartoonists and illustrators produced from the late 1800s to the present. Though the fields of cartooning and illustration were long dominated by men, many women have created art intended for reproduction and wide dissemination in newspapers, periodicals, and books. Women pursuing careers in the visual arts often encountered limitations in training, permitted subject matter, and suitable work environments. This exhibit highlights the work of women in these fields. Their work addresses such themes as evolving ideas of feminine beauty, new opportunities for women in society, changes in gender relations and issues of human welfare. The exhibit features 70 works by 43 artists and is organized into seven sections: Themes and Genres; Golden Age Illustrators; Early Comics; New Voices, New Narratives; Editorial Illustrators; Magazine Covers and Cartoons; and Political Cartoonists.

LOCATION: Graphic Arts Galleries, Library of Congress Thomas Jefferson Building, 10 First St. S.E., Washington, DC.

TIME: Monday through Saturday, 8:30 am - 4:30 pm
Free and open to the public. Tickets are not needed.

Documentary: The Rape of Recy Taylor Monday, April 9

In 1944 Recy Taylor, a 24 year old African American sharecropper in rural Alabama, was abducted and raped by six white men. Her safest option would have been to remain silent about this outrage against her. She did not. At great personal risk, Taylor identified her rapists. The NAACP sent a young investigator named Rosa Parks to work on the case. Together, the women rallied support across the country, though the men who raped her were never brought to justice. Seventy-four years later, Oprah Winfrey speaking at the Golden Globes award ceremony, recalled Recy's Taylor's ordeal and bravery. This is a horrifying and inspiring story, as relevant in 2018 as it was in 1944.

#MeToo & the Civil Rights Approach to Gender-Based Violence Tuesday, April 10

Dr. Nancy Chi Cantalupo's scholarship focuses on the use of law to combat discriminatory violence, particularly gender-based violence. She is a nationally-recognized expert on gender-based violence in education, and her scholarship draws from her 20 years of anti-campus sexual violence work as a researcher, campus administrator, victims' advocate, attorney, and policymaker. This work included consultations with the White House Task Force to Protect Students from Sexual Assault, participation on a U.S. Senate roundtable, and testimony before the Maryland and Virginia state legislatures.

The Dream Gala Wednesday, April 11

PLUMAS (Political Latinxs United for Movement and Action in Society), a student group at the University of Maryland at College Park, is raising funds to support the undocumented student community at UMD.

The fund began last year during and after the 2016 election, in anticipation of the upcoming changes the administration would bring to immigration policy and the undocumented community. Sure enough, DACA was threatened a few months later, and then TPS. Thanks to the fund, we were ready to act.

The funds raised went to nine people renewing their DACA status, and to one academic scholarship for an undocumented student. While we've currently run out of funds, the application for renewing DACA or TPS status is still available at go.umd.edu/renewDACA for any UMD students or community members in need, in anticipation of future fundraising.

As immigration policy continues to change suddenly, it unjustly targets the undocumented members of our own communities, and we want to offer support to those affected. Funds raised will go to status renewals, legal expenses, and other economic needs related to undocumented needs.

Please consider attending the event and/or donating to the fund at ter.ps/DREAMfund. Tickets are $10 for students and $12 for faculty/staff/community members and can be purchased at ter.ps/DREAMGALA18.

Walk a Mile in Her Shoes Friday, April 13

The International Men's March to Stop Rape, Sexual Assault & Gender Violence.

A Walk a Mile in Her Shoes® Event is a playful opportunity for men and people who identify as male, to raise awareness about men's sexualized violence against women and its devastating impact. There is an old saying: "You can't really understand another person's experience until you've walked a mile in their shoes." Walk a Mile in Her Shoes® asks men to literally walk one mile in women's high-heeled shoes. It's not easy walking in these shoes, but it's fun and it gets the community to talk about something that's really difficult to talk about: men's sexual violence against women.

We understand that men too are victims of sexual violence. This event welcomes and encourages participation from everyone who cares about this issue - regardless of sexual orientation or gender expression.

TRANS(form)ing Queer: The 11th Annual DC Queer Studies Symposium Friday, April 13

How does queer studies transform when we place transness at its center? In a daylong series of conversations about the history, present, and future of the overlapping, intersecting, but also often conflicting fields, we bring together scholars and artists to chart new directions for queer and trans studies. What forms of knowledge production might dictate or influence future political, academic, or artistic configurations - whether mergers, transformations, or the death of queer and transgender studies for something more radical?

Given its 11-year history, we see the DC Queer Studies Symposium as a particularly important place to provide space for these fields and to engage, interrogate, and highlight their ongoing evolution at a time of renewed political urgency. Thus, the symposium will be a space not only to reflect, but also to chart new directions for queer and trans studies.

Sponsored by the Department of Women's Studies, College of Arts and Humanities, and the LGBT Equity Center.

LOCATION: All symposium events are in Tawes Hall.

TIME: Friday, April 13, 8:30 AM - 6:45 PM. A full schedule of the day's panels and plenaries is here.

The Vagina Monologues Friday and Saturday, April 13, 14

It's Back! It's Back! It's Back! University of Maryland will be performing Eve Ensler's spectacular and powerful play "The Vagina Monologues". It's happening in Stamp Student Union in the Prince George's room! Its a night you do not want to miss!

The Vagina Monologues is a global movement to end violence against women and girls. This year's production raises money for CARE, an office at the University of Maryland that provides resources and services for survivors of sexual assault, dating violence, stalking and more. The Vagina Monologues at the University of Maryland, College Park is a LGBTQIA+ organization that recognizes that not all women have vaginas and not all people with vaginas are women.

Academic Enrichment Grants for Women's Studies Majors

Deadline: April 20, 2018

Need research funds? Help with travel or registration fees to participate in an academic or leadership conference or workshop?

Women's Studies Majors are eligible to apply for Academic Enrichment Grants to fund research, participation in academic or leadership conferences and workshops, or other activities that will enhance your education in women's, gender, and/or sexuality studies.

Application deadline is April 20, 2018 for projects during the March 2018 - September 2018 time period. Students submitting applications by April 20 will be notified by May 1 if their project will be funded.

To apply, send a 250-500 word statement about the project/conference/ workshop/organizing meeting, etc. for which you are requesting funding and indicate how you see this relating to your work in Women's Studies. Also, submit a resume, budget, the name of one professor who can serve as a recommender, and, if applicable, a list of any other sources from which you are requesting funding for this same project. If applying for an activity that occurred prior to the application deadline, please submit copies of receipts to accompany your budget.

Applications submitted after the April 20 deadline will be considered if there are any remaining Academic Enrichment funds for the semester.

For questions about these grants or assistance with developing your proposal, please talk with Professor Elsa Barkley Brown, Director of Undergraduate Studies - barkleyb@umd.edu

Laura Nichols Award

Deadline: April 27, 2018

From her arrival at the University of Maryland in 1987 to her retirement in 2014, Laura Nichols was a key staff member in Women's Studies and an important advocate for equality and inclusiveness in the university as a whole. The Laura Nichols Award recognizes undergraduate students who exemplify her commitment to feminist principles and social change through their scholarship, service, activism, and/or creative endeavor. Women's Studies majors and certificates, Black Women's Studies minors, and LGBT Studies certificates and minors are all eligible.

Applications may be for activist, service, or creative projects that reflect a commitment to social change and the values of equality, inclusion, and justice. Applications may be for work done on-campus or in the wider community. In some instances awards may be given to support a student research project if it fulfills the goals of the Laura Nichols Award. Students may directly apply or nominations for the Laura Nichols Award may be forwarded by any member of the University community. We especially encourage students to nominate other students whose work they see as especially worthy.

Applications will be accepted for projects completed within the last 1 year, for ongoing projects, or for projects to be undertaken sometime within the next six months.

Applications/nominations will be accepted for work done by a single student or for a group of students working together in an activist/service/creative endeavor. In the instance that the nomination is for a group of students, the majority must be officially enrolled in one of the departments programs: Women's Studies major or certificate, Black Women's Studies minor, LGBT Studies certificate or minor.

Applicants must be in good academic standing at the time of the application and should submit:

- A 300-500 word statement describing the academic, service, activist, or creative project for which the nomination is being made and, especially, noting the ways in which this project reflects a commitment to social change and the values of equality, inclusion and justice. Please be as specific as possible in describing the work, considering its impact/importance or potential impact/importance, and indicating why it is especially worthy of the Laura Nichols Award.
- If you are proposing a new project: 100-200 word narrative of the applicant's prior work in this area or other qualifications for successfully undertaking the proposed project
- Resume(s)
- Transcript(s) (unofficial is okay)
- Names and contact information for two individuals who could serve as references in relationship to the project

In the case of nominations, the nominator should explain their relation to the student(s) and/or project and should confirm that the student(s) have agreed to be nominated.

The award carries a certificate and $600.

Applications are due Friday, April 27, by 4:00 p.m. and should be submitted via email to Professor Elsa Barkley Brown, Director of Undergraduate Studies in the Department of Women's Studies - barkleyb@umd.edu.

The recipient will be announced at the department's Undergraduate Research Day on Wednesday, May 2.

Recipients will be expected to submit to the department a short written report at the completion of their project.

Past recipients of the Laura Nichols Award:

Tyannis Carter for a project working with 8th grade girls in Baltimore, Maryland

Muhammad Mussadiq for work focused on health resources for sexual minorities, particularly the transgender community, in Pakistan

For questions about this award or assistance with developing your proposal, please talk with Professor Elsa Barkley Brown, Director of Undergraduate Studies - barkleyb@umd.edu

Rodler-Wood Scholarship

Application Deadline: April 30, 2018

The Department of Women's Studies invites applications for the Rodler-Wood Scholarship.

Current full-time undergraduate or graduate students at the University of Maryland are eligible to apply for this $1000 award. The award will be made on the basis of one or more of the following criteria:

- * demonstrated financial need;
- * hardship based on sexual orientation or gender identity;
- * academic interest in LGBT Studies;
- * extracurricular activities on behalf of LGBT issues.

Applicants should submit:

- 1) a brief written statement outlining their qualifications and interests;
- 2) a current unofficial transcript; and
- 3) one letter of recommendation (recommenders may submit their letter directly to the Rodler-Wood Committee at lgbs@umd.edu).

Materials can be sent by e-mail attachment (Word or PDF only) by 12pm, Monday, April 30, 2018 to lgbs@umd.edu. Put "Rodler-Wood Scholarship" in the subject line of your message. Or, hard copies of materials can be submitted to the Department of Women's Studies, 2101 Woods Hall, attn. JV Sapinoso.

A list of past recipients of the Rodler-Wood Scholarship can be found at <https://go.umd.edu/rodlerwood>

For further information, contact JV Sapinoso - sapinoso@umd.edu

Spotlight: Rachel Greenberg Studying Abroad in Italy

Hi! My name is Rachel Greenberg and I'm a Women's Studies and Government & Politics double major. I took the semester off from newsletter editing to study abroad in Florence, Italy! I'm studying at International Studies Institute, and one of my favorite classes is History & Politics of Modern Italy. I'm currently writing a research paper for that class on the 1970s feminist movement in Italy, which was centered around fighting for women's access to divorce and abortion. As someone who studies American politics and feminism from an American perspective, researching about another country's women's movement has deepened my knowledge and has given me a new context for my own feminism.

One of the best parts about studying abroad has been traveling! Within Italy, so far I've been able to visit Chianti, Siena, San Gimignano, Bologna, Verona, Venice, Viareggio, and Cinque Terre. My favorite was Viareggio, a small coastal town in Northern Italy. I went during their Carnevale, so they had an incredible parade with giant floats, most of which were political-- they expressed serious messages about American politics, global capitalism, imperialism, racism, misogyny, and war. My friends and I hung out with locals at the parade and learned from each other.

I've also had the opportunity to travel to Prague, Barcelona, Nice, and Lisbon. It's been so special to be able to experience so many different cities, even just for a weekend. Barcelona was my favorite so far, because of its beauty and vibrancy.

Of course, even though traveling is great, my favorite place to be is in my home city of Florence, a place I'm madly in love with (sorry mom, never coming home). The best days are the ones where I spend hours wandering the streets, popping in to shops on the way to grab a slice of pizza or a gelato, exploring beautiful churches, museums, and markets as I walk by, or just people watching in a busy square. These past two and a half months have been unbelievable, and I'm so excited to keep making memories in the next few weeks!

Undergraduate Research Day

Deadline for Proposals: April 17

Have you been involved in research as an undergraduate, either as an individual or as part of a team, at Maryland or beyond? Would you like the opportunity to present your work in poster-format at Maryland's largest, most visible and diversified showcase for undergraduate research accomplishments?

Then present your research at Undergraduate Research Day on Wednesday, April 25, 2018!

Submitting a poster proposal is free and easy - just use the online registration system on the MCUR website at <http://www.ugresearch.umd.edu/current-ugresearchday.html>

- the deadline to submit your proposal is April 17 but you are strongly encouraged to submit early. [Do note: the student completes the first part of the proposal, the faculty mentor the second part and submits so do complete your part early enough for your faculty sponsor to have time to complete their portion before the deadline.]

Undergraduate Research Day 2018 takes place in the Grand Ballroom of the Stamp Student Union from 1 to 4 pm on April 25 with poster set-up beginning at 11:30 am. You can be present part or all of the time. All majors and fields of research including creative and performing arts are welcome!

If you have questions, please contact ugresearch@umd.edu

JD/MA Dual Degree in Women's, Gender, and Sexuality Studies, University of Albany

Application Deadline: June 1

The JD/MA dual degree is an exciting new program articulated between the University of Albany Department of Women's, Gender, and Sexuality Studies and Albany Law School. This program allows graduate students to combine their interests in feminist, critical race, and social justice issues with legal studies, leading to professional employment in law, advocacy, nonprofits, non-governmental organizations, and community organizing, to name a few.

Students in the JD/MA dual degree program will fulfill requirements for both degrees, which may be completed in four years or less. They will spend their first year at Albany Law School and their second year in the M.A. program. The arrangement of the remaining two years is flexible. Students wishing to enroll in a dual degree program must meet the admissions requirements of each school, including the completion of the LSAT for Albany Law.

Students in dual-degree programs must earn 87 credits to receive the JD degree. A maximum of 12 credits earned in the M.A. program may count toward the 87 required credits. This maximum means that students must earn 75 credits at Albany Law School to obtain both degrees.

The M.A. in WGSS requires a total of 32 credits, including several core courses, a Master's Final Project, and elective courses forming a cohesive cluster. A maximum of 9 credits earned in the J.D. program may count toward the 32 required credits (and may possibly form the cohesive cluster requirement).

Applications for Fall 2018 semester are accepted through June 1, 2018

ID#: 169128

Preferred Class: Sophomore, Junior, Senior

Preferred Majors: All Majors

Job Function: Communication, Computer Science/Statistics, Creative/Design/Multimedia, Marketing/Sales, Research, Other

Duration: Semester or more

Hours Per Week: 10-40

Compensation: Unpaid internship

Location: Ellicott City, MD

Description: The National Center for Citizen Safety, Inc. (NCCSAFE) was sanctioned and incorporated by the State of Maryland on March 7, 2014 and is an official 501c Non-Profit status with the IRS.

The continued stand-up of this non-profit organization, NCCSAFE is now underway and we are promoting public awareness for citizen safety in the event of domestic terrorism, resources for reporting tips, and survivor and victim resources. The stand-up is comprised of advocacy campaigns, social media communications, 5k Survivor Run, creating legislation for mandatory safety drills, and other critical policy, fundraising, and campaigns. NCCSAFE needs a cadre of hard-working volunteers and interns to bring this much needed organization to fruition, with the ultimate intent of obtaining state (and national) recognition and funding.

To that end, we are offering unpaid internship/volunteer positions to those serious candidates who are pursuing a degree (or have recently graduated) in an applicable field that will help us move this effort forward (such as government & public relations, advertising, communications, marketing, law enforcement, information technology, social work/psychology, etc.).

This internship will be one that should be taken seriously with a 100% commitment. Additional work can be conducted outside of the aforementioned hours via teleworking from your home. Over the last year we have had excellent University of Maryland students who have gained a lot of experience from our internship.

A mandatory kick-off meeting for this internship will take place on at the beginning of June.

Island Press

Position Type: Off-Campus Part-Time, Post Doc/Fellowship

ID#:172285

Preferred Class:Sophomore, Junior, Senior, Masters Candidate

Preferred Majors:All Majors

Job Function:Other

Location:Washington, DC

Description:Island Press is accepting applications for a 12-month publishing fellowship, intended to serve as a pathway to a successful career in publishing, environmental communications, non-profit management, or related fields. It is aimed at attracting candidates who otherwise would not have access to publishing and to increase the diversity and inclusivity of the industry.

In particular, we seek to involve individuals who have close working or living experiences in communities that are historically under-represented in publishing, including the Black or African-American, American Indian or Alaska Native, Asian or East Asian, and Hispanic or Latino communities. We are committed to building a culturally diverse and pluralistic staff dedicated to the environment and to creating and working in a multicultural environment. This program is open to persons of all races and ethnicities.

The fellow will commit to full-time work in the summer and part-time work (15-20 hours per week) in the fall and spring thereafter.

What You Will Do

Gain experience in at least two departments (editorial, publicity, marketing, or production), with exposure to and instruction in the operations of other departments at the press.

Work closely with senior staff in each department and follow specific books through a full publication cycle.

Attend and participate in all relevant publishing meetings as a member of the staff.

We expect that you will learn the basics of acquiring, developing, producing, selling, and marketing books. In editorial, for example, you will gain an understanding of how editors identify authors and books for acquisition, and assist editors in working with authors to develop a manuscript that meets the agreed upon goals of the project. Fellows will also work with other departments-including marketing, design, and production-on behalf of specific book projects, and may take on additional projects to gain a deeper understanding of all areas of publishing.

Qualified applicants will have

A demonstrated interest in fields relevant to the environment, publishing, marketing, and/or communications.

Strong written and verbal communications skills, attention to detail, and a passion for getting things right.

A demonstrated interest in ethnic or cultural diversity, and experience working with diverse and minority communities.

Live within commuting distance of the Island Press offices in Washington, DC.

A basic understanding of MS Office programs, including Word and Excel.

We are flexible regarding the educational background of the candidate, but candidates with at least two years of college or equivalent experience are preferred.

Dates and Compensation

Approximate start and end dates: June 1, 2018 - May 31, 2019

Required hours: 40 hours per week initially, 15 to 20 hours a week during the academic year

Compensation: $15/hour

To Apply

To be considered for the fellowship you must provide the following:

A cover letter addressed to FELLOWSHIP COMMITTEE that answers the following questions in a maximum of three pages:

1. Explain why you are interested in publishing, and which aspects of the publishing process you find most interesting.
2. Tell us about a book or author that has shaped or informed the career path you hope to take.
3. Please describe any previous activities in which you have worked with minorities, women, or members of other underrepresented groups and how you expect those experiences might inform your work at Island Press.

Please also include a résumé and two letters of recommendation.

Applications should be submitted to resumes@islandpress.org with the subject "Island Press Diversity Fellowship." Letter of recommendation may be included in your application or sent separately to the email above. No calls please.

Current and former Island Press employees are not eligible. Applicants must be authorized to work in the United States.

Public Citizen

Position Type: Summer Internship, Internship (Fall or Spring Part-Time)

ID#: 170175

Preferred Class: Freshman, Sophomore, Junior, Senior, Masters Candidate, Doctoral Candidate, Post Doctorate

Preferred Majors: All Majors

Job Function: Other

Duration: Unspecified

Hours Per Week: 20

Compensation: Unpaid Internship

Qualifications: Unspecified

Location: Washington, DC

Description: Help us win a half dozen pro-democracy ballot measures this spring or summer! From overturning Citizens United, to protecting voting rights, to making our elections run on small donations from every day people - don't miss your chance to make a real difference for our democracy while learning organizing and communication skills.

The U.S. Supreme Court's Citizens United ruling has given big corporations and wealthy individuals the ability to spend unlimited amounts of money to influence the outcome of elections. Meanwhile, the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling in Shelby, which gut the Voting Rights Act, has enabled states to pass laws to suppress the vote of people of color, youth and the elderly.

This influx of money into the political process is damaging our democracy by amplifying the voices of nameless and faceless corporations and ultra-wealthy over the voices of "We the People." When it comes to addressing climate change, starting small businesses, passing sensible gun control, addressing educational inequities, reducing student loans, supporting the rights of workers, protecting the rights of LGBTQ people and women, our voices are being drowned out.

For example, a recent Washington Post analysis showed that just 50 families are responsible for almost half of the $600 million raised so far by Super PAC's in the 2016 presidential campaign. And a recent Princeton study shows that "economic elites and organized groups representing business interests have substantial independent impacts on U.S. government policy, while average citizens and mass-based interest groups have little or no independent influence." We must act now. More and more people are responding to this threat by joining together and calling on public officials to pass a constitutional amendment to overturn Citizens United. Sixteen states, more than 200 members of Congress and nearly 700 local municipalities have called for a constitutional amendment. Public Citizen is launching the next phase of our dynamic campaign to galvanize public support for a constitutional amendment that would restore our democracy. We are looking for a few amazing democracy interns to join us.

You've heard that corporations have lobbyists. At Public Citizen, we're the people's lobbyists, representing the public in the halls of power. We fight for public health and safety, champion corporate and government accountability, and campaign for fair trade, clean energy, and consumer rights. Now, we're gearing up for one of our biggest campaigns yet.

American Rivers

Position Type: Summer Internship

ID#: 170766

Preferred Class: Freshman, Sophomore, Junior, Senior, Masters Candidate, Doctoral Candidate, Post Doctorate, Recent Grad (up to 1 year out), Alumnus/a (beyond 1 year out)

Preferred Majors: All Majors

Job Function: Unspecified

Duration: 10 weeks

Hours Per Week: 20

Compensation: Unpaid Internship

Location: Washington, DC

Description: American Rivers is seeking a Social Media and Communications Intern who will be responsible for creating and maintaining a strong social media presence for the organization, publishing content to AmericanRivers.org, and researching and creating a database of local river nonprofits.

The intern will improve their core communications skills by supporting the design and execution of a social media marketing campaign, from the initial planning stages through to final reporting. By helping to develop other social media campaigns and setting up web pages from scratch, the intern will also acquire strong back-end web skills. Through researching articles, interviewing American Rivers staff [where appropriate] and writing blog posts and website articles, the intern will both develop valuable interpersonal skills and learn how to tailor media to a specific target audience. The intern will compile marketing statistics (e.g. followers, likes, etc.) on the success of campaigns, and remain current with best practices, strategies, and industry standards related to online communications.

We are looking for someone who is obsessed with social media, is capable of creating effective social media campaigns, has experience with the Wordpress platform, and has a passion for all things rivers.

Qualifications:

- *Current or recent student, with educational background in marketing, communications, or environmental science a plus;

*Experience with the effective marketing and utilization of social channels including Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, Pinterest, Google+, YouTube, and LinkedIn.

*Proven effectiveness with managing timely delivery of work against short deadlines;

*We are a dispersed team, so an ability to communicate effectively through email, phone, Slack, and Skype is a must.

The National Consortium for the Study of Terrorism and Responses to Terrorism (START), START, based here at the University of Maryland, is currently accepting applications for the Fall 2018 Internship Program!

We are looking for interns with a wide array of skills and majors (including but not limited to: Criminology, Communications, Government, International Relations, Public Policy, History, GIS, Geography, Economics, English, Mathematics, Psychology, Languages and Statistics). Students from any institution may apply and we will consider current and recently graduated undergraduates and graduates as well. In addition to the experience gained during their internship, interns will also receive mentoring, training and are able to participate in a calendar of professional development activities. START is also willing to work with academic institutions to enable students to undertake our internships for credit. Our internships are unpaid and students must be able to undertake their work hours at START at the University of Maryland College Park, unless stated in the internship description.

Below is a short summary of the opportunities available. Please visit our website for more information and to access the application form: <http://www.start.umd.edu/careers/internships>.

Global Terrorism Database (GTD) Internships

The Global Terrorism Database (GTD) is the most comprehensive unclassified terrorism database in the world. Currently updated through 2016, the GTD details information on more than 170,000 terrorist attacks that have occurred since 1970. Data from the GTD have been featured by the BBC, CNN, The Daily Show with Jon Stewart, The Economist, The New York Times, Reuters, The Washington Post, and numerous other media outlets. The data are also used by the United States Department of State in its annual publication, Country Reports on Terrorism. GTD interns gain valuable experience working on a time-sensitive data collection effort that is used by those responsible for shaping United States counterterrorism policy. The GTD intern team is organized into the following themes:

- GTD: Incident Location and Geographic Identification
- GTD: Perpetrator Identification
- GTD: Target Classification
- GTD: Understanding the Patterns and Use of Weapons and Tactics
- GTD: The Consequences of Terrorism - Casualties and Outcomes
- GTD: Coding Intern At Large (Generalist)

Open-Source Geospatial Intelligence Internship

These internship opportunities will consist of open-source research in furtherance of a large-scale data collection effort to determine possible points of entry (POEs) across a variety of nations.

Cartel Smuggling Open-Source Project

Conduct open source research to identify transnational criminal Cartel Smuggling organizations, in South America and the United States that may be relevant to attempts to smuggle illegal drugs and material. Interns will research specific groups, translate Spanish information to English, and identify new or emerging patterns relevant to project interest. Interns may also be involved in additional data collection on those organizations and networks that are deemed as having the capability to engage in such trafficking. Interns may also work to identify or verify through open sources transportation networks in the regions of interest.

Unconventional Weapons and Technology (UWT): Aviation Insider Threat Research Internship

A principal goal of the homeland security enterprise is the deterrence, detection, and prevention of radiological and nuclear (RN) terrorism against the United States. This effort is pursued in part through the understanding and analysis of various pathways and modalities of attack which adversaries could exploit. With the 2010 attempt by Al-Qaeda in the Arabian Peninsula to infiltrate the international air cargo (IAC) system, focus has turned to the possibility of the IAC becoming susceptible to terrorist plots involving uncontrolled RN materials, as well as the development of "insiders" who could help to facilitate these ends. Through rigorous study of the air cargo industry and the psychosocial factors which could precede a vetted employee's choice to betray his or her company's commercial goals, START has developed a novel modeling and diagnostic tool relying on a brand new approach to improving air cargo and air cargo personnel security now deployed in the IAC system. During the fall 2018 period, the project team will execute the software tool's deployment with government and commercial cargo entities.

Communications Internship

The START Communications team is seeking communications, public relations or journalism students to serve as interns this fall semester. Rather than performing START research, candidates chosen for this project will gain extensive experience writing and publishing, developing social media strategies, and monitoring and reporting various analytics for the organization as a whole. Interns will also have the opportunity to work with the news media, learn media list and monitoring programs, and work in graphic design.

Multimedia Internship

The START Communications team is seeking a Multimedia intern this fall. Rather than performing START research, candidates chosen for this project will gain extensive experience filming and editing professional training videos, assisting in designing concepts for multimedia projects and using a studio lighting kit to produce high quality video. Interns will also have the opportunity to work with the Multimedia team in order to design graphics and photograph company events.

ICONS Project Internship

The International Communication and Negotiation Simulations Project (ICONS) is a unit of the National Consortium for the Study of Terrorism and Responses to Terrorism (START) at the University of Maryland, College Park. ICONS creates web-based computer simulations for policy analysis and forecasting to help public and private sector organizations solve complex problems. Our policy division creates bespoke simulations to support think tanks, cabinet-level agencies, and Department of Defense major commands as they tackle complex national security challenges. Our Education Division places high school and college students from around the globe in challenging online simulation and gaming exercises that allow them to role-play resolving contentious geo-political issues.

START/State Department Terrorist Organizations Project Internship

START is excited to be able to offer a limited number of highly selective intern positions to students interested in working on projects for the U.S. State Department using START data (such as the GTD) and other open sources. Students will be tasked with developing materials that create a realistic scenario based on extensive research on history, geopolitical situations, and internal religious or ethnic cleavages in a region in support the Bureau of Counterterrorism training efforts. This internship will be co-supervised by START on-site staff at the University of Maryland and by project leads at the U.S. State Department. The U.S. State Department leads will set and give feedback on tasks.

Understanding Domestic Radicalization and Hate Crimes

This internship will support START research focused on the processes of radicalization to violent extremism and hate crime offending in the United States. The core component of this research portfolio is the Profiles of Individual Radicalization in the United States (PIRUS) dataset, the largest dataset of US-based cases of radicalization of its kind, which contains information on the trajectories, mechanisms, and consequences of violent and non-violent extremism at the individual level. PIRUS and its related projects have already generated significant attention among policymakers and scholars, and PIRUS researchers have published several reports and articles based on the data.

Unconventional Weapons and Technology (UWT): Next-Generation Intelligence Analysis (NGIA)
NGIA project interns will assist researchers as they identify subject matter experts with a technical background in chemical weapon technologies and, furthermore, will help test a new model of adversary chemical weapon adoption. These efforts contribute to a larger project that combines machine learning with traditional intelligence analysis approaches. Interns will be exposed to novel next-generation techniques used within the intelligence community.

UWT-START is working with other institutions to develop scalable process for the discovery of emerging or disruptive technologies that affect WMD viability. To successfully accomplish this, the team will build on its members' existing expertise and work in the areas of WMD threat assessment, technology adoption and innovation, data-driven and expert-driven risk assessment methodologies, and global, multi-lingual computational information search and extraction. UWT-START's role will be to facilitate the elicitation and integration of subject matter expertise into the overarching tool.

Unconventional Weapons and Technology (UWT): DARPA Sigma+ Project

UWT is seeking highly driven, outstanding students to participate in cutting-edge research on CBRNE adversary activity funded by DARPA. These tasks cover an array of research techniques and subject areas including quantitative methods, adversary modelling, and chemical weapon development. The primary purpose is to assist DARPA in the development of innovative approaches for detecting CBRNE activity. Responsibilities and duties will include the following:

- Assisting UWT staff with red teaming exercises and workshops. This will include:
 1. Organizing and designing participant handbooks
 2. Participating in red teaming exercises
 3. Data collection and preliminary analysis of participant outputs (scenario components and search histories).
 4. Assist staff with scenario construction
- Compiling and conducting preliminary analysis of red team exercise output data
- Assist staff members with identification of observable indicators of CBRNE attacks that could be identified by intelligence analysts.

Unconventional Weapons and Technology (UWT): Advanced Research Internship

Designed for highly motivated, high-performing students, Advanced Research Interns participate in high-level substantive research and analysis for a variety of projects within the broader unconventional weapons and technology portfolio. Past Advanced Research Interns were tasked with projects such as designing models of insider threats in the aviation system, conducting imagery analysis of nuclear facilities to determine vulnerabilities, and assessing sophisticated engineering capabilities of terrorist and criminal organizations. This internship provides an opportunity for extremely capable students to engage in research in a manner that is akin to a staff researcher at START and provides greater levels of responsibility and participation in real-world projects than many other internships. More advanced terrorism concepts and analytical skills are explored and developed in a collaborative, team-based environment. Advanced Research Interns may be involved in multiple projects simultaneously and have the opportunity to help transition projects into a variety of mediums and publications, including potential opportunities for co-publications.

Why choose an internship at START?

- Experience working with a large team of dynamic and experienced researchers.
- Exposure to cutting edge theories and methods.

- Deepen your understanding of current issues in terrorism and homeland security.
- Work on projects of immediate interest to the practitioner and policy community.
- Hone and develop a range of transferable skills attractive to future employers.
- Opportunity to work with and meet other students and researchers with similar interests.
- Enrichment activities offering wide opportunities for learning and personal growth, schedule includes simulations, career presentations and research talks.
- Mentorship from START staff and researchers in a successful professional environment.
- Internships can be undertaken for academic credit (depending on approval from your institution and department).

General requirements

Applicants for all internships must:

- Have a good academic record.
- Demonstrate an interest in the subject matter.
- Be able to complete their internship work hours on site at START.
- Agree to attend orientation and training.
- Submit an application by the deadline, all application packets must include:

Quote of the Week

Our lives are a battlefield on which is fought a continuous war between the forces that are pledged to confirm our humanity and those determined to dismantle it; those who strive to build a protective wall around it, and those who wish to pull it down; those who see to mould it and those committed to breaking it up; those who aim to open our eyes, to make us see the light and look to tomorrow [,] and those who wish to lull us into closing our eyes.
